

Gbenga Oladeji

My name is Gbenga Oladeji, CFA, CAIA. I have over 20 years of investment management experience spanning institutional asset management and credit research. I am currently a Vice President at Johnson & Johnson Benefits Investment team, overseeing Global Alternatives. In addition to leading the Alternative Investment strategy, I am part of the leadership team that play a critical role in global asset allocation and manager selection. Prior to joining Johnson & Johnson, I held various investment roles at Casey Family Programs, JP Morgan, William Penn Foundation and Morgan Stanley.

My deep industry knowledge has been enhanced by the CFA Institute's comprehensive learning outcomes and the extensive research and symposiums it facilitates. I am immensely grateful for the invaluable educational and professional resources that the program has provided. These resources have enabled me to exchange ideas with other industry practitioners, to educate and influence my current organization and team.

In addition to benefitting from the services provided by the CFA Institute, I am also an active member of the CFA NY Society and volunteered for local and national chapter activities. I have volunteered in various educational initiatives organized to shape the learning outcomes in addition to contributing to NY Society panel discussions.

Over the years, the resounding feedback I have received on my core leadership strengths includes my ability to influence, find common ground, and make complex ideas clear and achievable. I deeply believe in the importance of listening to diverse views, engaging to build understanding, and inspiring positive business and social outcomes. Finally, I am grateful for the CFA resources that I continue to benefit from, and I view serving on the Nominations Committee as an opportunity to give back.

I look forward to hearing from you and thank you so much for your consideration.
