

Ronald Sutedja Tao, CFA is an investment professional based in New York and an active member of CFA Society New York. My involvement with the Society has been primarily through regular participation in the Toastmasters program and the Value Investing Group, where I have been a consistent attendee. Through these forums, I have valued the opportunity to sharpen communication skills, engage in thoughtful investment dialogue, and connect with peers who share a commitment to professionalism and ethical standards. CFA Society New York has served as an essential community for continuous learning, disciplined thinking, and professional accountability throughout my career.

I am a Senior Quantitative Researcher at Polynomial Partners, a startup hedge fund specializing in event-driven and index-rebalance strategies. My work focuses on research, portfolio construction, and risk analysis in environments where rigor, independence, and sound judgment are critical. I regularly evaluate complex data, manage trade-offs, and translate analytical insights into actionable decisions. Across my career in investment management and quantitative research, adherence to ethical principles and long-term stewardship has been foundational to my work.

I am seeking to serve on the Board or Nominating Committee because I believe strong governance is essential to the long-term health and credibility of CFA Society New York. The Nominating Committee, in particular, plays a vital role in identifying and developing leadership that reflects the Society's values, strategic needs, and diverse membership. This responsibility requires objectivity, integrity, and a structured approach to decision-making.

If selected, I would contribute in three primary ways. First, I bring a disciplined, analytical mindset that is well-suited to evaluating board composition, leadership competencies, and long-term succession needs. Second, I bring a broad professional network and collaborative orientation, developed through cross-functional work and engagement across the investment community. Third, I get practical leadership and mentoring experience, including serving as a Georgia Tech ambassador, where I mentored junior students and helped prepare them for mock interviews and professional development. This experience reinforced the importance of thoughtfully and inclusively developing future leaders.

My goal would be to support a nomination process that is fair, transparent, and forward-looking—one that strengthens the Society's leadership and ensures CFA Society New York continues to serve its members and the profession with integrity and excellence.
